There was an air of extreme optimism at the New Haven offices, and Supt. O. M. Shepard went so far as to say that he did not believe that the Flannery order had ever been sent out. Advices from Chicago, however, state positively that Flannery did send out the order as soon as he heard from President Lawrence Curran last night.

"If such an order was sent out." said the New Haven of the Room man in New England would go out. I have sent requests for information all along the line to-day and can get no news of anybody quitting. I can not extreet, and James Roach, of No. 605 Water street, were arrested and locked up.

Custom - House Inspectress Had Married Girl Civilly and Finds Several Handfuls of Diamonds Concealed in Waist of Woman on Pretoria.

When the Hamburg-American line steamship Pretoria arrived at Hoboken rom Bremen to-day Mrs. Darrow, a Custom-House inspector, consulted a description which had been previously given her and singled out from among the saloon passengers a handsomely gowned woman who was bossing a lot of lackies as they landed her great array of baggage.

'I wish to see you alone a moment,' said Mrs. Darrow to the woman, who was possibly thirty-five years old and of dashing beauty. The woman flushed, saw Mrs. Darrow's badge of office and Certainly, where shall we go?"

Mrs. Darrow took her into a private room and there told her she would have to submit to a search. She submitted, and Mrs. Darrow removed a huge false bosom and, ripping this up, took from it several handfuls of diamonds. When the woman was again dressed

When the woman was again dressed the chief inspector was called in. He bok charge of the diamonds, saying:

"There are many thousands of ioliars' worth of stones here. It is the greatest amount I ever saw one person try to bring in at one time."

After that the officials threw much mystery about the case. If the woman was arrested she was not taken to the Hoboken Jail nor was she arraigned before the United States Commissioner there.

before the United States Commissioner there.

The seized gems were brought to New York by the Customs officer. On the pier it was said that the woman was released and told that she could regain possession of the jewels by paying the duty and added penaity.

Another report on the pier was that she was a prominent woman, socially and financially, and that many of the jewels taken from her were her own, which she had taken abroad with her and that when she came back she feared trouble and mixed them with a great many others she had purchased while abroad and concealed them in her dress.

The fellow-saloon passengers were as-tounded when they heard of the selzure. The woman had spent money with a lavish hand coming across, and gained especial prominence and dignity by having more baggage than any other reassenger.

MRS. JONES AGAIN FRENCH DEPUTIES TRIES TO ESCAPE

Woman Found Yesterday Makes Renewed Effort to Run Away To-Day, but Is Caught After Chase to Broadway.

tFLIGHT AND PURSUIT AROUSE NEIGHBORHOOD.

Woman Went to Drug Store, Where She Made Some Purchases-Little Son Saw Her Leave House and Gave Alarm

Mrs. H. Leroy Jones, who was found ast night in a west side rooming-house after ten days' absence from home, ran away again to-day, but was caught at Twelfth street and Broadway and taken back to the house The whole neighborhood was aroused by her flight and the pursuit of her husband.

Upon the return of Mrs. Jones she was assured by her husband that the esplonage of a nurse to which she had been subjected previous to May 16, and which caused her, she says, to run away from home, would be removed. Apparently she was satisfied with this arrangement, and she was left alone in her room to-day.

She had been playing with her little boy, and it was he who discovered that she had left the house. He ran through the hall crying "Where is my mamma?" Mr. Jones was taking a bath when he heard the cries of the child. He telephoned to an ergine-house half-way down the block that his wife had left the house and asked the firemen to stop her. Then he shouted orders to his servants to start out after Mrs. Jones, and dressed himself as rapidly as possible to take part in the chase.

Went to Drug Store.

As she was leaving the house Mrs. Jones picked up a winter hat and a brown veil. She wore a light house-gown. Two maids who followed her tried to persuade her to return, but she refused to listen them, saying she was going to a drug store. Before she would return to the house she went to a drug store in Broadway and made some purchases. From the time left the house until she was ready to return she was shadowed by a policenan, who had been called by the maids. He had no authority to arrest her but he kept her in sight to see that she did not come to harm. During her absence from her family and while every newspaper in this part of the country contained columns upor columns about her and her disappear ance Mrs. Jones had a remarkable ex perience. She knew that to keep hidden she must leave New York, so she went to Wilmington, Del., where she secured work as a farm servant. On a farm near Wilmington this New York society woman arose at 4 o'clock in the morn ing, washed and scrubbed and cooked and drudged far into the night for a week or more.

Tiring of the unusual labor, she left the farm and, pawning some clothing in Wilmington, succeeded in getting back to New York.

Mrs. Jones was found last night in cheap hall bedroom at No. 468 West Twenty-second street, where she was living, having paid $2 in advance for room. The proprietor of the boarding-house called upon Mr. Jones benefit for twelve years, and that her and told him that a mysterious woman
